

This map displays the state of Wisconsin, divided into its 9 counties. Each county is labeled with its name in blue capital letters. Major highways are shown as thick blue lines, with route numbers in white circles. Population data points are represented by black dots, each with a numerical value indicating the population. The map uses a color-coded system to distinguish between different regions or counties, with colors including blue, green, yellow, and red. The population values range from 100 to 10,000, with higher concentrations in the central and southern parts of the state.